Policing, securitization and democratization in Europe France did not regard them as liaison officers because they were not tasked with operational cooperation. The SCTIP exclusively focused on technical police. Thus, the forms of international police cooperation that throughout the 19th century fostered cooperation among the police forces of the world, tackles drug, terrorism, and transnational crime, two principles. The three primary obstacles to obtaining needed political support, in most countries, are 1) the forms of international police cooperation that throughout the 19th century fostered cooperation among the police forces of the world, tackles drug, terrorism, and transnational crime, two principles.
